A 35-year-old Miller Road man was contacted by T-Mobile last Wednesday and told of a suspicious order made under his name. That led to the man checking his credit monitoring service and finding another fraudulent transaction, Darien police said.

The other transaction was an inquiry/account application at Overstock.com. Police, who were informed of the matter on April 13, said the man was able to cancel both transactions with no loss of money. Police had no evidence of any local criminal activity and no suspects.
