The lowdown on what's up around town ...

Yes, two of those kids are wearing turkey legs on their heads. No, not real ones. Here, take a look, and see what their posters say (well, partly):

This year's Christmas wreaths on lampposts downtown, along the Post Road and elsewhere in Darien are checked each year by volunteers from the Darien Men's Association (DMA), who make sure the bulbs are working properly.

"This year, 18 members showed up on Nov. 9, 2017, at Town Hall and replaced 213 bulbs that were faulty on 92 wreaths," reports Jack Fitzgibbons, DMA chairman of Community Services in an announcement from the group. "It's something we do every year to help support the town."

The wreaths are put up and paid for by the Darien Chamber of Commerce. The wreaths are hung on lampposts on the Post Road from Noroton Ave. to Sedgewick St. They're displayed on Day St. and at Tilley Pond.

a meal at Pacific House emergency shelter on Monday evening, Nov. 13. The shelter, which houses and feeds up to 110 homeless men and young adults each evening, serves the communities of Greenwich, Stamford, Darien and New Canaan. About 50 men were there for the meal.

Pacific House "is one of the premiere organizations that supports people in need," said Leone, whose district includes Stamford and part of Darien. "When we see the needs by coming here, it's easier to fight for your resources and services."

Leone and the other officials were there in part to observe National Hunger & Homelessness Awareness Week, held each year the week before Thanksgiving.

"I suppose it has become natural for many of us to question the motivations of our elected officials," said Andrew Barer, Pacific House director of development. "These gentlemen all have a long history of helping Pacific House in many ways. They have demonstrated that their interest in helping the homeless is truly genuine."

At Grand Central Terminal, the annual Holiday Fair started last Monday in Vanderbilt Hall and continues right up until 6 p.m., Christmas Eve. It's open weekdays from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. (but closed on Thanksgiving Day).

"It's one of the longest-running indoor holiday fairs in New York City, and will feature 40 vendors selling artwork, clothing, men's/women's accessories, children's toys, home goods," says the MNR Newsletter of Metro-North. "If you can't find that special something for that special someone there, then you'd better believe in Santa Claus (because he's going to be your last best hope)."

Pre-K students at Methodist Family Center Preschool, along with their teachers and the school director, took a field trip last month to the Darien Community Association.

There they met Chris Filmer, DCA Board Member and Tour Guide, who led them on an outdoor exploration of the property.

The children explored the stump walk, rock spiral and log walks and hunted for worms. They checked out bird boxes and feeders, bat boxes and the butterfly garden.
