Darien is out with a new annual report, traditionally a document required by state law, but with a pretty long lead time — this latest town annual report is for the fiscal year ending June 30, 2014.

What can you learn about the town from the latest report? It's got statistics from Town Hall about local government operations (OK, so they're a bit old), about the schools and some information about the community. Someone thinking of moving to town might find it interesting, but even longtime residents could probably learn a thing or two or four.

Here's a link to the document in PDF form, and below is a compendium of tables and other information found in the document.
