Al married Bernadette Marie Stanton on Feb. 15, 1969, and together they raised two children in Darien where they lived for 46 years.

Al had a long career as a certified public accountant, a consulting executive, and later, a managing director of several New York City law firms. He started his career at Arthur Young, where he became a partner in 1977.

He left Arthur Young to manage the business affairs of several large law firms. He recently retired as managing director of Curtis, Mallet-Prevost, Colt & Mosle LLP, a law firm with headquarters in New York, with offices around the world.

For almost 40 years, Al was a member of the Country Club of Darien, where he enjoyed playing golf with his family.

He also loved traveling and seeing the world far and wide. He was always looking forward to his next trip. He traveled all over Asia and Europe and parts of the Middle East for work or pleasure. In 1976 and 1977, he spent a year in Greece working on a consulting project. He loved to go to Italy and France on vacation.

A great joy in his life were his three grandchildren — Christian, Caitlin and Charlotte Davidson — with whom he enjoyed golfing, Yankees games and all kinds of movies and Broadway shows. He loved swimming and seeing his grandkids at his pool.

He also loved his dog, Jack, a 13 year-old black lab who was the most loyal dog in the world.
