Hollow Tree Self Storage will be hosting a "Grand Opening Celebration" from 4 to 7 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 25 at the business's new location on Hollow Tree Ridge Road in Noroton Heights.

"Octoberfest beer, wine and appetizers" will be served.

With family ties to the town of Darien, business owners and brothers John Hertz and Paul Hertz along with Robert Wood and Tim Wood created the self storage facility, which has about 1,000 climate-controlled units.

"We offer a business center on site where you can fax important business documents and use a computer with a high-speed Internet connection to stay in contact with your professional peers," the business says on its website.

HTSS is secured by a gated perimeter with electronic access, a state-of-the-art surveillance system, and on-site property managers who will provide around-the-clock security and service to customers, according to a 2017 news release from the business.

The building, which is 100 percent climate controlled, will offer wine storage, car storage and museum quality storage.

There are 16 commuter parking spaces available for lease close to the Noroton Heights train station.

The new business occupies a site that's been difficult for others to use for many years.

Despite the fact that the property lies close to the Noroton Heights business district, the large lot sat vacant for decades with a major development problem: Sewer service is difficult because the land sits between the highway and the railroad tracks.

Avalon Darien, which was built just to the west (and north of the Darien South rest stop), after that land also sat unused for decades, declined to provide a connection to its own sewer system.

Only a caretaker for the property will live at the storage site, and these kind of sites tend to generate little traffic, the Planning & Zoning Commission was told when the land-use application came before it.
