

Darienite

News for Darien

<http://darienite.com>

Police: Woman, 70, Shoplifted $222 Worth of Small, Relatively Expensive Items from Supermarket

Author : David Gurliacci

Categories : Public Safety

Tagged as : Darien Shoplifting 2018Larceny from a Business 2018

Date : January 26, 2018

When a store detective saw Aida Hanna, 70, walk past cash registers carrying items and not paying for them when she left Whole Foods Market, the detective confronted her outside and later looked over the loot, it turned out to be $222.58 worth of relatively expensive goods: deodorant, argan oil and various seeds.

The woman, a resident of Staten Island, N.Y., had been seen by the store detective (also known as a "loss prevention officer") putting the items in a black tote bag before walking past the registers and out the door.

Police were called at 5:17 p.m., Jan. 16 by the supermarket at 150 Ledge Road.

According to police, the woman admitted to them that she took the items without paying. She was charged with sixth-degree larceny and released on a $200 bond. She was scheduled to appear Jan. 26 in state Superior

Darienite

News for Darien

<http://darienite.com>

Court in Stamford.