Several thefts were discovered on Friday from 17 unlocked cars and sport utility vehicles entered overnight — 13 on Allen O'Neill Drive and four more on Herman Avenue, two blocks to the east.

The 17 vehicles were parked outside nine homes on Allen O'Neill Drive and two homes on Herman Avenue.

Most of the vehicle owners in that Noroton Heights neighborhood told police they didn't find anything missing, and the list of items looted from the vehicles is pretty short: A wallet (with an unknown amount of money in it), a dart set valued at $160, a Dunkin Donuts gift card, a Macy's store card.

Vehicles reported as having been entered but with nothing stolen from them usually have items from the glove compartment or center console strewn about inside or are found with doors left ajar.

After police were notified early Friday morning by one of the victims who found items taken from her sport utility vehicle, police canvassed the neighborhood and quickly found many other cars that had been entered. The police canvass started before 6 a.m.

- Darien police have said before that if people simply started locking their cars at night, they would prevent these thefts and make it less inviting for the thieves — who are often teenagers from in town or from cities in Connecticut — to come around looking for things to steal.

Here's what vehicles were entered (sometimes more than one from the same address), what was stolen from them (if anything) and where the vehicles were parked outside (organized by street number and street):

Editor's note: Darienite.com includes the addresses where unlocked cars are entered because neighbors ought to know who's helping to attract thieves to their neighborhood, because it's hard to believe anyone could possibly be harmed by anyone or everyone knowing their vehicle was entered, and because it's extremely easy for a victim to prevent this crime from ever happening again.
