The building on the south side of the railroad tracks at the Noroton Heights station, separating two parts of the parking lot, will be torn down over the course of two or three days next week, the town Department of Public Works announced Wednesday.

Here's the announcement:

The Town of Darien has hired a contractor to perform the demolition of the Myers Building at the Noroton Heights Railroad Station South Parking Lot.

The contractor will be staging at the site on Monday, Oct. 21 and will begin demolition on Tuesday, Oct. 22 at the Myers Building.

The parking lot ramp between the lower level parking on the south side of the station to the Post 53 area will be closed during the day for 2 to 3 days — weather permitting.

We will attempt to not close the ramp until after 8:30 a.m. and re-open around 4 p.m. each day.

The Town has placed Variable Message Signs (VMS) on site to alert the public of the upcoming work.

The project should not take a significant amount of time to complete and after the backfilling and the compaction is done, the area will then be blocked off until the work area has settled through the winter.

Upon completion the parking lot and ramp area will be able to be used as it is now.
