Darien town government has published a list of town restaurants open for take-out services, curbside pickup, home delivery or some combination of those services while their seating is closed to reduce the spread of COVID-19.

Editor's note: A "sidebar" with advice from a National Public Radio article has been added to the bottom of this page.

- Also, Stop and Shop supermarkets, including the one in Goodwives Shopping Center at 25 Old Kings Hwy. North, will be open early mornings for only seniors (60 years old and older) from 6 to 7:30 a.m. every day. The rest of the public can come in after that.
- Palmer's Market on Heights Road in Noroton Heights is offering emergency grocery delivery (at a cost of $10) to assist home-bound, under-quarantine or high-risk individuals. You can call the supermarket at 203-655-2077.

Advice for When You Bring Cooked Food Home

From a March 17 National Public Radio report:

- When you get home with your food, you could take it out of the containers, throw those out, and then wash your hands thoroughly before eating, says Drew Harris, a population health researcher at Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia. "We don't want to get too crazy about this, but taking reasonable precautions should be sufficient," he says.
- Luckily, the food itself "is probably not a major risk factor here," Daniel Kuritzkes, an infectious disease expert at Brigham and Women's Hospital, told NPR. That's because most infections from the new coronavirus appear to start with the respiratory system, not the digestive tract.
- On a grassroots level, people are also urging folks to support their favorite local restaurants and retailers by buying gift certificates that they can use later.
